In 2022, almost 1,300 companies and 8,000 people operate in the landscape of Estonian start-ups. The annual growth of the sector is about 30%, which is faster than the growth of gross domestic product. While 2% of the economy today comes from agriculture, 3% already comes from start-ups.

With today's growth continuing, the start-up sector has set a goal that in five years the Estonian technology sector will have twenty thousand employees and in ten years more than 50 000. This will make just under 10% of all working people in Estonia in 2030.
